This is a nice little restaurant that also offers an excellent breakfast and a good lunch. The service is good, the atmosphere is informal and the prices are reasonable. Mostly, however, the food, although simple, is very tasty. We have been to this restaurant many times in the last 10 years where we lived in Adrian. We usually go for breakfast as these are one of the better values in town. The lunch menu is also very good mainly featuring comfortable meals. The building finds most people cute and modest. The interior is as small as you'd expect from the small appearance of the building. When I first brought my mother here, she noted that the restaurant reminded her of places from a bygone era. There's a bit of vintage appeal as the booths and simple tables have a bit of a Depression-era feel. My mother was a child of the '30s and '40s, so I suspect that's why she resonated with him. My favorite here is fried oatmeal, and that's what I got on our last visit. It's always a treat. This time our daughter, our son and his girlfriend were with us and we all ordered breakfast. My son also had the fried oatmeal, while the other parties had the standard eggs, bacon and potatoes. Everyone enjoyed the breakfast food as the hash browns were particularly tasty and the portions were more than adequate. Prices have always been excellent here. The total cost of coffee/teas, tax and tips was about $7 per person this time. What we got was a fantastic value. Overall, this is a delicious little restaurant that serves simple American amenities. The breakfast they serve is particularly good and the fried oatmeal is an outstanding item. The service, while back, is always good as they are efficient and do a great job of making the coffee cup stuffed. The atmosphere at home bordering is nostalgic and the prices are quite reasonable. If you want a hearty breakfast in a relaxed environment, it is worth trying this place. This is a nice little restaurant that also offers an excellent breakfast and a good lunch.
